Laffalot Summer Camp receives recognition

Laffalot Summer Camps have been bringing its zany fun to Cincinnati area kids for 19 years and due to recent expansion throughout Cincinnati and the Southwest Ohio area the program is getting recognized. At the end of the 2008 camp season Laffalot Summer Camp was given the award for "Best Camp for Kids: Fun and Games" by Cincinnati Magazine.

Pat Nymberg, the Cincinnati resident and physical education specialist who developed the program, was delighted with the award. "It is a recognition we are very proud to receive," said Nymberg "because it validates our objective of providing an athletic development and fitness program that is centered around playing and having fun."

Laffalot Summer Camps bring a unique blend of fun and athletics for kids in grades one through six. Kids participate in traditional sports, enjoy non-traditional athletics such as scooter basketball, pillo pollo and crazy ball as well some of the programs zanier activities.

"Too much time is spent in either sedentary activities like TV and video games, or single skill athletics," Nymberg said. "Kids at this age need to use all muscle groups and it doesn't work unless having fun is at the center of everything you do."
